

The Gabii Project: Field School in Archaeology

Rome, Italy June 16- July 20, 2019

About the Gabii Project

We are an international archaeological initiative promoted by the Kelsey Museum of Archaeology at the University of Michigan. We have been excavating the Latin city of Gabii since 2007 in order to study the formation and growth of an ancient city-state that was both neighbor, and rival to, Rome in the first millennium BCE. Our research tackles questions about the emergence of zoning and of proper city blocks, street layouts and their relationship to city walls, definition of élite and commoner neighborhoods, development of monumental civic architecture, abandonment and repurposing of public and private areas, and much else, through the integration of spatial data, architecture and stratigraphy, and a wide variety of finds spanning from the Iron Age to the Late Roman periods.

What you will learn

- The archaeology of Rome and Latium, including guided trips to select sites and museums and off-site lectures
- Excavation and interpretation of ancient Gabii
- Digital, cutting edge recording techniques
- Scientific processes, including environmental and biological analysis

What is included

- Program costs: $4,950 for first time volunteers/ $4,450 for returners.
- Accommodations in vibrant Trastevere, Rome.
- Insurance, equipment, local transportation, weekday lunches, select museum fees.
- 24/7 logistical support.
- Apartments include: kitchen facilities, washing machines, wireless internet.

Not included: international flights

APPLY NOW!

Fill out the online application at <http://gabiiproject.org/apply-now>.
Applications must be submitted by
March 1st, 2019.

Questions? Contact us
gabii.project@gmail.com

M UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

